Dear Mr. [REDACTED]

Thank you for contacting us about your concerns. As America's oldest animal welfare organization, the ASPCA takes very seriously its commitment to help animals. The ASPCA's mission is to provide effective means for the prevention of cruelty to animals throughout the United States. As you may know, we offer national programs in public awareness, animal behavior, government advocacy, shelter support, and animal poison control. Our New York City headquarters houses a full-service animal hospital, adoption facility, and Humane Law Enforcement Department. In addition, we offer free spay/neuter surgery via five fully-equipped mobile veterinary clinics that travel to many of NYC's neighborhoods.

Our Animal Product Safety Service (APSS) is a division of the Animal Poison Control Center and provides services to pet parents and corporations. Through this program we manage product exposure cases, recommending care for animals and providing expert opinions about exposures and differential diagnoses. This corporate sponsorship program gives us the opportunity to help more animals through funded consultations and assist industry with their adverse event reporting.

I hope this information helps to clarify our relationship with sponsoring APSS companies and eases your concerns.

Sincerely,

Ed Sayres
